GRE waiver for all undergraduates with at least a 3.6 GPA!

Are you interested in professional or academic work that involves research and writing? Do you want to be part of a cutting-edge community of writers and thinkers engaged in the study of literature, culture, and critical theory?

The Master of Arts (MA) program in English at UB can help you realize your aims.

UB's MA in English provides training from the medieval period to the contemporary avant-garde in theoretical inquiry and literary/cultural research for students without prior experience and/or interested in pursuing a PhD. It also provides resources in professional writing, digital humanities, and media study. It is among the most flexible and interdisciplinary programs in the nation.

- > One third of MA graduates pursue PhDs, another third obtain jobs in secondary education or writing, and the final third pursue careers in a range of fields, including law, business management, and marketing.
- > MA students can apply for the Certificate in Innovative Writing, which presents a unique form of graduate study in creative writing, closely intertwining the practice of writing with literary and aesthetic inquiries.
- > New York State resident graduate tuition in the 2015-2016 academic year only $5,435 for full-time study.
