Baldy Fellowships in Interdisciplinary Legal Studies

The Baldy Center inaugurated a new Fellowship program for scholars pursuing important topics in law, legal institutions, and social policy. More than fifty applications were received from junior and senior scholars from law, the humanities, and the social sciences. Four fellowships were awarded for the 2012-2013 academic year.

Fellows are expected to participate regularly in Baldy Center events, but otherwise have no obligations beyond vigorously pursuing their research. Fellows receive standard university research privileges (library, Internet, office space, computer, phone) and are encouraged to develop collaborative research projects with SUNY Buffalo faculty members where appropriate. Those who wish to teach a course to aid their research or gain teaching experience are accommodated on a case-by-case basis.

The three Post-doctoral Fellows were:

Mireille Abelin, an anthropologist doing comparative research on perceptions of selfhood, sovereignty, and money as they crystallize in anti-tax movements in the United States and Argentina. Mireille will be teaching at the New School for Social Research in 2013-2014.

Nimer Sultany, a scholar of progressive constitutional and political theory, who studies how Islamic sharia law is incorporated into the constitutions of Middle Eastern countries, even as the Arab world moves toward democratization. Nimer will commence a Lectureship in Public Law at the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London, this fall.

Julia Tomassetti, a sociologist examining the legal construction of paid work relations in the United States since the 1970s, particularly categories such as prison labor, workfare, and graduate student teaching. Julia will commence a Research Fellowship in Law at Georgetown University in the fall.

The Senior Fellow was:

Kathleen Biddick, a professor of history at Temple University in Philadelphia completing a book-length manuscript titled Entangled Sovereignty: A Study in Premodern Political Theology. After a very successful visit at UB, Kathleen returns to her Professorship at Temple.
