Another Busy Fall at the Baldy Center

The Baldy Center enjoyed another busy fall, hosting two conferences, one book launch, one book manuscript workshop and seven speakers. Professor Irus Braverman started the year with More-than-Human Legalities, a conference that drew scholars from across the US, Canada and the United Kingdom. On September 16, the Center was pleased to celebrate the launch of Professor Rebecca French and Assistant Professor Mark Nathan’s new book, Buddhism and Law: An Introduction.

On September 26, the Baldy Center facilitated a book manuscript on behalf of Assistant Professor of History Jennifer Gaynor. Book manuscript workshops provide Baldy Affiliated scholars with an opportunity for peer review and discussion before a manuscript is submitted for publication.

September also saw visits from Aziz Huq, University of Chicago Law Professor, Luc Foisneau, Director of Research French National Center for Scientific Research, and Julia Minich, Assistant Professor of English at the University of Texas at Austin.

In October, Law Professor John Henry Schlegel convened a discussion on Opportunities for Law’s Intellectual History, a conference that drew top scholars from across the country.
In October and November, the Center hosted four speakers, Greg Shaffer, UC Irvine Chancellors Professor of Law, Osagie Obasogie, UC Hastings Professor of Law, Simon Singer, Northeastern University Professor of Criminology and Criminal Justice, and Gywnn Thomas, UB Associate Professor of Department of Transnational Studies.

Baldy Alumnus makes September Visit

In September the Center was pleased to host Baldy alum and criminology scholar James Meeker. Meeker began his studies at SUNY Buffalo in the late 1960s, earning his B.A. in Sociology in 1973, and, after entering the J.D./Ph.D. program, his M.A. in Sociology in 1977, J.D. in 1978 and Ph.D. in sociology in 1982. Meeker received a Baldy Dissertation Fellowship to complete his doctoral studies in sociology.

His dissertation was titled, “Socioeconomic Impact on State Supreme Courts: 1870-1970.” In reflecting on his years at Buffalo, Meeker recalled: “I came back to Buffalo [after spending time at the University of Washington] in ’74–’75. ... I had a Baldy Fellowship.”

Meeker fondly recalled working with both established and up-and-coming scholars during his Baldy years. Meeker’s time spent in Buffalo proved very valuable for the young academic. It was during this time Meeker learned, among other things, “you can’t get all caught up in the jargon, you have to write so people will understand.”

Meeker most recently served as the Associate Dean of Students for the School of Social Ecology at the University of California, Irvine, which has a highly regarded law and society program. Meeker joined the Irvine faculty in 1981, teaching in the newly established Program in Social Ecology and in Department of Criminology, Law & Society. He is a widely published scholar of criminology, with a primary focus in gang crime and additional research interests in access to justice, legal service delivery, and domestic violence.

Recently retired, Meeker piloted his way to Buffalo from California in a kit-built aircraft. Meeker joined us for lunch with former classmates and longtime Baldy affiliates.

We were very pleased to host him and heartily invite other Baldy alumni to visit the Center. Please visit and let us know you are coming. Please contact Candace Morrison, Baldy Research Assistant BaldyResearchAssistant@gmail.com or Laura Wirth, Assistant Director lawirth@buffalo.edu. We look forward to being in touch!

Major Grants Awarded to Baldy Affiliated Scholars

Baldy affiliated faculty won at least four major grants in recent months. Two grants, a National Science Foundation award and State Department award, were directly assisted by the Center’s new grant application support program, which is spearheaded by Dr. Caroline Funk, Baldy Research Associate.

With Dr. Funk’s assistance, Mary Nell Trautner, Associate Professor of Sociology, was awarded a $163,640 NSF Sociology Program grant for her work, “Media and Legal Decision-Making” (Award #SES-1421442). Dr. Funk also provided grant development assistance to Professor and Baldy Director Errol Meidinger and Baldy Senior Fellow Margaret Shannon, which enabled the scholars to secure a $100,000 U.S. State Department grant on “Building Shared Understanding of Illegal Logging Regulation in Russia and the U.S.”

Other recent significant grant awards include a $50,000 Resources Legacy Fund grant to Associate Professor Jessica Owley for her work on collaborative conservation easements. Professor Irus Braverman received a $45,000 American Council for Learned Societies Ryskamp Fellowship (Spring & Fall 2014), and a $60,000 Society for the Humanities & Atkinson Center for a Sustainable Future, Cornell University, Residential Fellowship (2013-14) to pursue her research on the management of wild life.
In addition, the Baldy Center awarded a number of grants to UB researchers pursuing innovative projects on law, legal institutions and social policy. Recapturing Baldy’s History

Officially established in 1978, the Baldy Center has played a significant role in supporting research and attracting law and social policy scholars to the University. A few stayed for careers, many for semesters at a time, and most for a few stimulating hours of lecture and conversation. We now endeavor to recapture and honor this history.

With nearly forty years of institutional history, creating a comprehensive account of the Baldy Center is a substantial task. The Center has recruited the help of two young scholars, both law students, to help conduct interviews with Baldy alumni and affiliates, to review archived documents, and give fresh eyes to the Baldy story. This approach is very fitting given the Center’s reputation for fostering and supporting emerging legal scholars.

The ultimate goal of the project is to develop a narrative of the Center. Along the way, we hope to collect interviews, stories, fond memories, documents, photographs—a tapestry of history, triumphs and challenges, a reflection of nearly forty years of the Baldy Center at the University at Buffalo.

If you are a former Baldy scholar, whether a fellow or grant recipient or featured speaker, we would love to hear from you. Please visit and let us know you are coming. Please contact Candace Morrison, Baldy Research Assistant BaldyResearchAssistant@gmail.com or Laura Wirth, Assistant Director lawirth@buffalo.edu. We look forward to hearing from you.
